SCHOOL BUDGET IS ADOPTED

Totals $296,450, of which $228,243.50 must be raised by taxation—Higher Salaries and N. Y. C. Tax Refund Cause Increase.

CITY SCHOOL TAX RATE IS $11.40

The city school tax rate this year is $11.40 per thousand valuation based on the amount of the budget adopted by the board of education Friday evening.

At the meeting of the board of education held Friday evening at the high school, the budget for the school year ending July 31, 1924, was offered by the finance committee and adopted as offered by the board. The budget calls for a total for operating the schools of $296,450, of which $228,243.50 must be raised by the general city tax levy. In offering the budget for the year, Trustee Van Wagoner stated that it should be made clear to the public that the general operating expenses of the schools for the coming year were about the same as for the past year, and that the increased amount which it was necessary to raise was due principally to two things. The first was the increase in teachers' wages due to the annual increment, and also by reason of the act of the last legislature giving the teachers an additional yearly increment, and the second factor was the compulsory refund to the New York Central Railroad for taxes paid which the courts have ruled must be refunded. But for these two items he stated that the budget would be found to conform with other years.

NEW RULES FOR FIGHTING AIRCRAFT

Warlike Radio Regulations Included In Hague Revision of Rules Authorized by Washington Conference—Bombardment of Defenseless Cities Prohibited.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, June 23.—Another of the major accomplishments of the Washington arms conference has been consummated with the acceptance by the Allied powers of the new rules of international law governing the use of radio and aircraft in time of war.

The revised rules, drafted at The Hague by a committee of jurists authorized by the Washington conference, constitute a comprehensive and humane control over the newest agencies of warfare. It was learned here today that the recommendations are now being drafted into the form of a treaty to give them permanence.

Of foremost importance is the absolute ban on the dread air raids, such as terrorized the populations of London and Paris during the world war.

"Aerial bombardment for the purpose of terrorizing the civilian population, or destroying or damaging private property not of a military character, or of injuring non-combatants is prohibited," declares article 22. "Aerial bombardment for the purpose of enforcing compliance with requisitions in kind or payment of contributions in money is prohibited."

"Aerial bombardment is permissible under the new rules only when directed 'exclusively' at a military objective. Such objectives are defined as 'military forces; military works; military establishments or depots; factories constituting important and well known centers engaged in the manufacture of arms, ammunition, or distinctly military supplies; lines of communication or transportation used for military purposes.'"

Belligerent aircraft likewise are cautioned to take all necessary steps "to spare as far as possible buildings dedicated to public worship, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals, ships, hospital and other places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided such buildings, objects or places are not at the time used for military purposes."

Detailed instructions are given for the marking of such places so as to be distinguishable by day or night.

One of the outstanding features of the rules governing use of radio is that when "a belligerent commanding officer considers that the success of the operation in which he is engaged may be prejudiced by the presence of vessels or aircraft equipped with radio installations in the immediate vicinity of his armed forces or by the use of such installations therein, he may order neutral vessels or neutral aircraft on or over the high seas:

"1. To alter their course to such an extent as will be necessary to prevent their approaching the armed forces operating under his command, or

"2. Not to make use of their radio transmitting apparatus while in the immediate vicinity of such forces."

Failure to comply with these commands would expose the craft to the risk of being fired upon.

The remainder of the radio regulations follow in general existing rules and treaties.

WOMAN JUMPS TO DEATH WITH INFANT

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, June 23.—Temporary insanity, caused by heat, was ascribed by the authorities today as the cause that led Mrs. Mary Loser, 21 years old wife, to leap from the roof of the five-story tenement at 711 East Twelfth street with her three months old baby in her arms. The baby was instantly killed, the mother died later.

The falling bodies knocked down a five-year old boy playing in the street.

Fred Loser, the husband, said his wife had been nervous since the hot wave struck the city.

LINGUAGLOSSA STILL MENACED

But Lava Stream Has Slowed Down Greatly and Other Mollten River Has Virtually Stopped.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Catania, Italy, June 23.—While the lava flow from Mt. Etna had slowed down today to 100 yards every 24 hours, reports from the destruction zone said that Linguaglossa was still menaced.

The molten stream pouring towards Castiglione and Lorina has virtually stopped and it is believed those communities are now out of danger.

Explosions are less frequent and the earth tremors less violent. The sky is still overcast with clouds of smoke and reddish dust.

Rome, June 23.—While the flow of lava from Mount Etna has died down, the menace of a recurrent eruption is not yet passed, according to information from Messina today.

LEVIATHAN DUE IN N. Y. SUNDAY

We Went Faster For Ten Hours Than Any Other Passenger Ship In World, Says Lasker.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Aboard American liner Leviathan, June 23.—By wireless to INS—Homeward bound after establishing a passenger liner speed record of 28.04 knots or nearly 30 miles an hour, the giant liner Leviathan with her passenger list of guests on board is due to reach Ambrose Channel tonight and to dock at New York tomorrow.

The test of the Leviathan's engines on the trial spin was said by experts to be one of the most severe in maritime history. The ship behaved perfectly.

The Leviathan was off the Carolinas today, bowing along through cool, clear water. All on board are well. There have been no cases of seasickness.

American shipping men on board believed that the Leviathan will prove a prime favorite with sea travelers when she begins her trans-Atlantic service July 4.

Albert D. Lasker, former chairman of the shipping board, is elated over the showing of the great vessel.

"We have gone faster for ten hours than any other passenger ship in the world," declared Mr. Lasker.

NO MONEY TO SEND MAIL ABROAD NEXT WEEK

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, June 23.—No parcel post packages addressed to foreign countries will leave this port next week, and even first class mail will be held up from June 28 to July 1.

This announcement was made today by the superintendent of outgoing foreign mail. The reason for this order, emanating from Washington, is that the increase has been so great and unexpected in American mail for foreign countries that the post office department $6,500,000 appropriation for that purpose has been practically all used.

It is estimated that $50,000 parcel post packages and 500,000 first class letters will be held up.

Conditions will become normal July 1, when the new postal appropriation begins.

MELLON TO SAIL ON MAJESTIC

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, June 23.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, here today to sail for Europe, denied himself to reporters and refused to discuss the object of his visit abroad.

It was reported however, from a semi-official source, that he is going to England to smooth out the difficulties that have arisen in the enforcement of the provisions of the prohibition law affecting foreign shipping.

Ordinarily, it was explained, such negotiations would be conducted by the state department, but as the disagreeable features in the situation concern the customs departments of the two countries it was decided that Mellon would undertake the trip to smooth over the situation pending settlement by the courts of the test of the American law by British shipping lines.

Customs officials here said today they had no knowledge of the purpose of Mellon's trip abroad.

Mellon, it was learned, has a reservation on the White Star liner Majestic, although his name does not appear on the passenger list.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Wiscasset, Maine, June 23.—On the eve of his departure today for the Arctic, Donald B. Mac Millan, famous American explorer, received a personal message of Goodspeed on his expedition from President Harding.

"I have been much interested to know that you are sailing again for the Arctic, with the purpose of exploring Ellesmere Land," wrote President Harding. "Your splendid services in the way of Arctic exploration are recognized everywhere, and I do not need to assure you that the good wishes of all Americans will go with your expedition. To you and your companions, my heartfelt good wishes and hopes for a successful expedition and a safe return."

A rousing farewell demonstration was given the explorer and his party. Among those present were General A. W. Greeley, survivor of the famous Greeley expedition of 1884, and Langdon Gibson, who was with Robert E. Peary during his 1891 polar dash.

BALTIC'S LIQUOR IS REMOVED

Canfield Supervises—Hitch Occurs When Health Officer Is Late In Declaring House Is Beverage, Not Medicine.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, June 23.—Acting upon government orders, United States customs officers today removed from the British lined Baltic liquor which had been brought into American territorial waters under British customs seals.

The liquor was loaded upon trucks backed up at the White Star pier. When the officers first went aboard the Baltic the work of removing the liquor was held up by a telephone message from the office of the collector of the port. After an hour's delay the officers resumed their labors and soon cases of beer, stout and whiskey were being carried from the ship.

It was understood that the delay was due to the failure of the public health officer to arrive on time to make formal decision as to whether the liquor was intended for beverage purposes or medicinal uses.

Finally the public health officer arrived, examined the liquor and determined it was for drinking purposes. Then work of unloading was commenced in earnest.

The official British customs seals, by which the shipping company had hoped to preserve the liquor stores intact in American "prohibition waters" had been previously broken by United States customs authorities.

The government party was headed by Prohibition Director Palmer Canfield and William Sanders, deputy surveyor.

BRITISH PRESS IS IRRITATED

Government's "Hands Off" Policy In Dry Ship Squabble Is Criticized—Retaliation Is Urged.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, June 23.—Although the British press is in a fever of excitement over Washington's orders to seize beverage liquors carried under seal on English liners, the government today is resolutely maintaining a "hands off" attitude, leaving the lines to fight their own battles in the courts. However, British officials are keeping an alert watch upon all developments arising from the American "dry ship" edict.

The British government does not question the right of the United States to break the official British customs seals under which the beverage liquor was carried into American territorial waters governed by the United States prohibition law. Such action by United States conforms with Great Britain's practice in her home waters.

Newspapers are featuring all angles of the controversy, and some are severely criticizing the government for not backing up the shipowners. The Daily Express calls the situation the "acid test" of prohibition. It condemns the government for "evasively standing aside."

The Evening Standard points out that the liquor controversy was not a matter for settlement by "legal quibbling," adding:

"Diplomatic representations is the only dignified way to deal with a matter which concerns not local laws but international amity."

The Daily Graphic, in its comment, said: "The people of this country resent the attempt by America to impose its will upon British ships without a more specious reason for doing so."

"The whole ridiculous squabble could be set right by the stroke of a pen," said the Daily Mirror. "The whole world is laughing at America."

The Daily Mail said:

"Our shipping is our very existence. Without it we cannot pay the American debt. Nor can we permit it to be attacked arbitrarily nor harassed. If it is so attacked retaliatory measures against United States ships are inevitable. There is no other choice, our solvency is at stake."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FORGET-ME-NOTS

"Sometimes," said a little Forget-Me-Not growing in the garden in a shady place near some ferns, "I think of my other name, and I smile to myself."

"Often I've seen you smiling to yourself," said Fairy Princess Joy, "and perhaps you've been thinking then of your other name. I don't believe I know of any other name which you have," she continued, "and I'm sure I'd like to know."

"Perhaps I've several names which I do not know myself," the Forget-Me-Not continued.

"You know we flowers are like that. I do hope we're never rude because of it. At least, we try never to be."

"You see, sometimes some one will go up to a flower and will speak to that flower by a name the flower has never really known it had."

"To be sure, people make mistakes and call flowers by their wrong names. They forget the names of flowers just as they forget the names of people."

"It is quite, quite easy to understand that they would do this."

"But I mean that they often speak to flowers by names which the flowers somehow feel are names which they really own and yet which they don't know themselves."

"Now, there are the gorgeous pink flowers—Mountain Laurels. They're also called Calico Bush flowers."

"And Pink Azalea flowers are also called Pinksters. They rather like the name of Pinksters better than the other. They say it is so simple a name, and that it sounds like the woods and not like a greenhouse."

"And Pinksters do love the woods! But, as I say, we flowers always try to be very polite as we're called by our different names and we try to smile our nice how-do-you-do's back at people."

"My other name is Mouse-Ear. Isn't that a funny name?"

"Oh, yes," laughed Fairy Princess Joy, "that is a funny name. I don't think I've ever heard you called by that name before."

"I have been called by it," said the Forget-Me-Not, "but not very often. And, as I say, I may have other names. Some other members of the family may know of them, but at the time I can only think of my usual name of Forget-Me-Not and my other one of Mouse-Ear."

"Do you wonder I laugh or smile to myself when I think of that name?"

"It is such a funny name! As though I had an ear like a mouse! Have I? Tell me that, Fairy Princess Joy. Do you think I have anything about me that is like a mouse's ear?"

"I don't," said Fairy Princess Joy.

"It is not that I would mind," the Forget-Me-Not said. "I am not silly and I do not think myself so much above a mouse. In fact, a little forget-me-not is so near the ground that it should not think itself above anything."

"Ah," said the Fairy Princess Joy, "the creatures who should not think themselves so superior always do. I suppose it is because they have made themselves small because they've thought they were so big."

"I mean that people grow small in their minds and in their natures when they think they're so big and so important."

"I see," the Forget-Me-Not answered. "But, as I said, it is not that I would mind, but I don't think there is very much resemblance."

"Now we different Forget-Me-Not flowers are just as alike as we can be. I wouldn't blame anyone for saying, 'I can't tell you from your little brother or your little sister. In fact, I think you all are tremendously alike.'"

"I think we all look amazingly alike, but I don't think we look like the ears of mice. In the first place, mice are gray and we are blue, with centers of yellow."

"And mice only have two ears and we have five petals apiece. But I do think it is a funny name and, as I said, I smile to myself and so do many of us when we think of that name."

"But now I must think about looking my best, for I have been given a nice drink of water and I want to look all spruced up!"

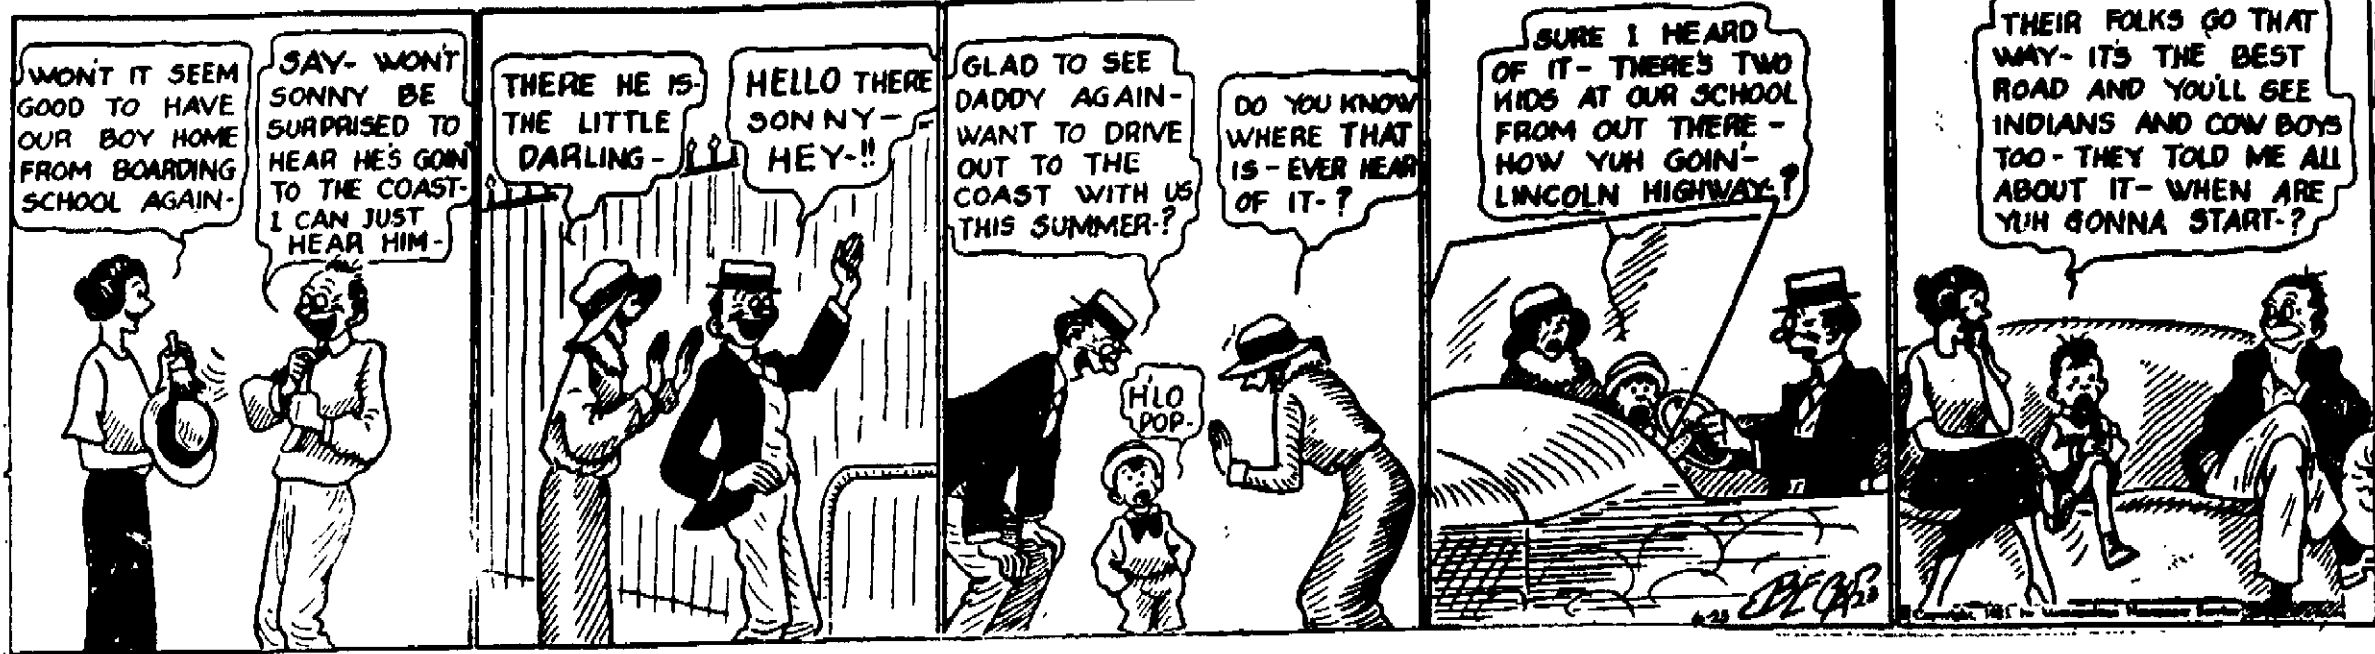

"You see, someone transplanted us from a river bank to this little fern garden because we were so much loved and because we were wanted near at hand."

"So we try to do our best, as we are watered so much and cared for in so kindly and understanding a way."

GAS BUGGIES—Things Have Changed Since Father Was a Boy

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

No price is set for the lavish summer. June may be had by the poorest cumber.

SPRING VEGETABLE DISHES

The tender young carrots, green peas, delicious asparagus and new green onions make a fine variety with the pretty radish and an occasional cucumber.

Asparagus and Eggs.—Make a white sauce, using three tablespoons of butter, bubbling hot, and three tablespoons of flour and when well-blended add three cups of milk gradually. Season with salt, cayenne and white pepper and add one cup of finely-diced Young American cheese. Stir until the cheese is melted, then add one-half cup of thin cream. Have ready six hard-cooked eggs in the shell and cook a bunch of the tender portions of asparagus cut in inch-pieces. Slice the eggs and add to the asparagus; do not stir to destroy the shape; add the sauce and serve on slices of buttered toast.

June Salad.—Place white lettuce on a glass salad plate, radiate cooked asparagus stalks toward the edge, leaving space in the center of the mound for cooked, seasoned, green peas; surround with a ring of cooked carrots, sprinkle with French dressing and pipe thick mayonnaise in rings around the vegetables, putting a whirl in the center which is garnished with a few white lettuce leaves. Sprinkle the carrots with minced parsley and the peas and asparagus with finely-chopped red pepper.

Spiced Blackberries.—There is no more delicious pickle than that prepared from the wild blackberry. Take seven pounds of blackberries with three pounds of sugar and one pint of vinegar. Into the vinegar and sugar place a small cheese cloth bag of two teaspoonsful each of cinnamon and cloves with a little nutmeg. Let the spices stand in the sugar and vinegar for several hours, then boil ten minutes, add the berries and when they are well scalded put them into a jar and pour over the boiling hot sirup. The sirup may be boiled down to half the quantity before adding, then the spice bag may be removed if too much spice is not liked.

SHADY. June 23.—On Wednesday, June 20, a very enjoyable day was spent in the home of John T. Miller of Shady, N. Y., it being the eighty-second birthday of his wife, Julia. Quite a number of the family were present. The Rev. John M. Versteeg, wife Edna Ames and young son Sherwood from Port Jervis, N. Y., Mrs. Elizabeth Ames of Weehawken, N. J., Mrs. Edward H. Sterling and daughter Lois and Mrs. Raymond Mackey of Newburgh, N. Y., Mrs. J. B. Hoyt and daughter Julia and Mrs. Mande Guzman of Shady. The guests from out of town arrived Tuesday at 9 p. m. via auto bringing with them tokens of love and hearty congratulations and good wishes. After a bountiful dinner prepared by the children and grandchildren present, preceded by the doxology, they left for their respective homes leaving Mr. and Mrs. Miller with many pleasant memories of a very happy event.

CHANGES IN CORNELL STAFF

The Directors Chandler and Burritt Resign Positions in Agricultural College at Ithaca.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Ithaca, N. Y., June 23.—The trustees of Cornell University have received the resignations of Dr. W. H. Chandler, professor of pomology and vice director of research in the College of Agriculture, who leaves on June 30 to accept appointment as research professor of pomology at the University of California at Berkeley; and of Maurice C. Burritt, professor in extension service and vice director of extension in the same college, whose resignation will be effective December 31. Director Burritt leaves to take up the management of his fruit farm at Hilton, Monroe county.

Dr. Chandler came to the New York State College of Agriculture from the University of Missouri in 1913, as a research professor of pomology. He was advanced to the headship of the department of pomology in 1915, when C. S. Wilson, the former head, became state commissioner of agriculture. When the legislature created the position of vice director of research in 1920, Dr. Chandler was elected to this position, which he has since filled. Vice Director Burritt is a graduate of Cornell, having received the degree of bachelor of science in agriculture in 1908, and the master's degree in 1910. He was elected to the staff of the college in 1914, giving up the editorship of the New York Tribune Farmer for the college position. He was state leader of county agricultural agents from 1914 to 1916, the period of most rapid development of the county agent and farm bureau system in this state. He has held his present position since 1917, being the first person to hold a vice directorship at the college. On July 1 he will assume the title of director of extension, by action of the trustees at their recent meeting.

WOMEN MAY NOW WEAR SMALLER SHOES

Treatment With Carter's Actually Makes Feet Smaller.

NEW USE FOR WELL KNOWN REMEDY.

Women who have been looking wistfully at dainty feet shod in the popular new fancy slippers will welcome this little household secret. Many of those dainty, small-looking feet are larger than you'd think. The reason they are able to wear such small shoes with such apparent comfort is because they are keeping their feet flat. There are several ways to do this but the most effective and the one that will give you the most permanent results is the use of Carter's Liniment. Hundreds of women, however, are able to wear smaller, smarter shoes, because they took their bottles of Carter's Liniment from the medicine chest and put it to this well-known remedy for aches and pains to a new use. Rub the feet well with a generous application of Carter's and you will quickly relieve the tired, aching, burning condition that has set in in summer time. Swelling is so reduced that smaller sizes in shoes are comfortable possible. It is a good thing to know that Carter's is a sterling foot remedy as well as a remedy for all aches and pains because it saves the expense and bother of expensive treatments with unknown and untried remedies. Carter's is a flesh that is agreeably perfumed, does not sting or smart, contains no oil or other substance to stain clothing and it is really a Godsend to tired, aching, burning feet. It's only fifty cents at any drug store.

The Unexpected Happens

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Frank Ingraham had come to New York with the avowed object of acquiring a sufficient income so that he might go back to Midvale and marry Alice Clifton.

Frank was sure of his ability to command the future, and Alice had consented to wait. For Frank had nothing to begin with except ability and industry, and Alice was a penniless orphan brought up by a spinster aunt. The young people had had an idea of getting married anyway and trusting to luck for the rest. But Alice's wiser and more cautious aunt had so strongly objected to such an imprudent step, and had advanced so many arguments against it, that Frank and Alice, being made to realize that their youth would permit of a little delay in their matrimonial projects, and having had impressed upon them the necessity of a steady and sufficient income as an adjunct to housekeeping, had agreed to postpone for a while the marriage upon which they were both firmly resolved.

"Give the boy a chance; don't hamper him with a wife at the very beginning of his career," had urged the sagacious aunt, and Alice, thinking it over, had come to the conclusion that perhaps her aunt was right.

"You ought to be ashamed to marry a girl before you have a sufficient income to support her," the aunt had said to Frank, and Frank had reluctantly agreed with her.

And such in effect had been the advice of Simon Drysdale, an old friend of Alice's aunt, who took a paternal interest in both the young people and was accounted the richest man in Midvale. So there was Frank in New York, and there was Alice in Midvale, writing long and loving letters to each other, but seeing each other only when Frank made his annual visit to his home town, or when Alice's aunt took her niece on an annual visit to New York. Frank and Alice had bound themselves to a two years' probation—and now that period of waiting was drawing to a close. Thanks to a letter of introduction from old Simon Drysdale, Frank had procured a situation at once upon his arrival in New York. He had "made good," been steadily advanced and was now in the possession of an assured income which would enable him to support a wife in modest comfort.

Frank's letters to Alice and hers to him were now filled with plans for the immediate future and discussions as to who should be the bridesmaids, the best man and the officiating clergyman. The sky was all serene. Then suddenly came clouds, storm and cataclysmic disaster to the soul of the heretofore hopeful and happy Frank. Midvale was a small village and boasted of no newspaper. But Midvale's nearest city, fifteen miles away, was a place of some 200,000 inhabitants and boasted several newspapers. One of Frank's fellow clerks was from this city of Poppleton, and his mother sometimes sent him the Poppleton Gazette, which he, if he happened to think of it, would turn over to Frank after reading it himself.

"Here, Ingraham," said he one day, "here's the Gazette; want to see it?" and threw the paper on Frank's desk. The paper fell so that the page in one corner of which were published the notices of births, marriages and deaths lay uppermost. As Frank picked up the paper he casually glanced over these vital statistics. A familiar name caught his attention. He looked closer, his eyes staring, scarcely believing that he saw aright. But there it was in plain print: "Married—at the rectory of St. Anne's church, Midvale, by the Rev. Daniel Mathers, Miss Alice Clifton to the Hon. Simon Drysdale."

For a while Frank sat staring straight before him unseeing, all his senses dumb. When he was able to think again many things, before unconsidered, came rushing upon his memory. He remembered how old Simon had always agreed with Alice's aunt as to the necessity of a term of probation for the lovers; how readily he had given that letter of introduction. That was to get Frank out of the way! He saw it all now.

And the paternal interest Simon had evinced in Alice—the old serpent! But that Alice should have proved false—no matter how much pressure had been put upon her, no matter how alluring had been the Drysdale fortune—that was too horrible! A thousand little things occurred to him now which he told himself, should have warned him. Alice's letters had always been affectionate, it was true, but now he recalled all the expressions in them indicative of her impatience at the delay in their marriage.

"Yes, poor girl," he said to himself, "she got tired of waiting, and they urged her; and Drysdale is so rich, and—well, God bless her, anyway!" He felt the tears starting to his eyes; he must not give way before the men in the office. Hastily he seized his hat and started for the street. As he reached the hallway the elevator was just coming up. It stopped at his floor to let off some passengers and he saw, emerging from the cage with the others, a young lady who advanced toward him with extended hands and a beaming smile—his loved and lost Alice.

"Oh, Frank," she cried, "going out? Caught you just in time, didn't it? Aren't you surprised? I'm on here with my aunt. She's on her wedding tour. Why, what's the matter? Aren't you glad to see me?"

The bewildered Frank had caught hold of the side of the wall for support. But Alice had hold of one of his hands and bubbled on: "It's the funniest thing—aunt and Mr. Drysdale were married quite suddenly and very quietly. He was a widower, you know, and it seems that he and my aunt were in love with each other when they were young people—a hundred years ago, more or less. They are waiting for me down in the street in an automobile. Come and congratulate the bridal couple, Frank."

Frank recovered himself. What an aim he had been to remember that the aunt was Alice Clifton, too; but then who would have thought of her getting married? He looked around the corridor. It was deserted, and he gathered Alice in his arms and kissed her. Then as he ran for the elevator he said: "I saw the notice of the marriage in the Poppleton Gazette. Lead me to the happy pair. My gracious, Alice, your unexpected appearance nearly knocked me out at first. But glad to see you, old girl. Nobody was ever so glad to see anybody before in the world."

Alice looked at him with a curious expression, but they had been married six months before she got the whole truth out of him.

COPPER'S PLACE IN HISTORY

First Found on Island of Cyprus, With English Tin It Was Used to Make Bronze.

There is a chapter of history concealed in the word "copper." Copper was named after the place where it was found in the earliest time—the island of Cyprus. "Copper" is evidently a corruption of the name "Cyprus."

From Cyprus the mineral was exported by the enterprising Phoenician traders, who also ventured out of the Mediterranean, up the European coast and north to the British Isles.

Here—in what is now the duchy of Cornwall—these pioneer mariners found the natives mining a white metal now called tin. They took cargoes of this tin to Cyprus and there, by combining the copper with the tin, they turned out the metal called bronze.

After all the intervening centuries since the initial visit by the Phoenicians, perhaps more than 3,000 years ago, tin is still one of the main products of Cornwall.

Only Gorilla of British Empire.

At the last scientific meeting of the Zoological society Lord Rothschild exhibited a very fine example of the only species of gorilla known to occur in the British empire. It inhabits the Ruanda-Kivu region on the frontiers of the Belgian Congo and British East Africa, living in the forests on the mountain slopes at elevations of over 7,000 feet. It attains a height of over six feet. The heads of the adult males have an extraordinary crest and the whole animal is much more hairy than other gorillas. The Belgian government has placed the gorilla under strict protection and it is much to be hoped that a similar course will be adopted by the British authorities.—London Times.

Getting There in Time.

I was one of a committee that was putting on a home talent show for charity. I had spent many weeks working to make the show a success and gave mother two reserved complimentary tickets and instructed her not to come too early, as the seats were reserved. At half past six, as well as the rest of the committee, was at the theater. We heard loud rapping on the outer door. Imagine my feelings when one of the committee opened the door to admit my mother and younger brother with their complimentary tickets. The clock at home had stopped, and hence they arrived ahead of time for the show.—Exchange.

Had Warmth, Anyway.

One of the rainy days recently a man approached the exhibit of the Citizens' Gas company at the home complete exhibition, and, seeing a grate apparently radiating heat, stepped before it. He rubbed his hands, stood there for about ten minutes, looked at his feet, and then said to an attendant:

"Say, those grates are a mighty nice thing, aren't they? This one dried my shoes in a jiffy."

He walked away.

The grate was an exhibit. The "heat" was the light of electric bulbs reflected through a colored cloth.—Indianapolis News.

The Modern Thought.

With some misgivings a scientist belonging to the Luxor party consented to lecture for the benefit of a detachment of tourists. Leading them to the top of a dune, he announced: "This is the vast and solemn Sahara desert, 2,000 miles long and 2,000 miles deep." He expected them to be awed. But the only response was this from a cheerful spectator:

"What a jolly lot of parking space."

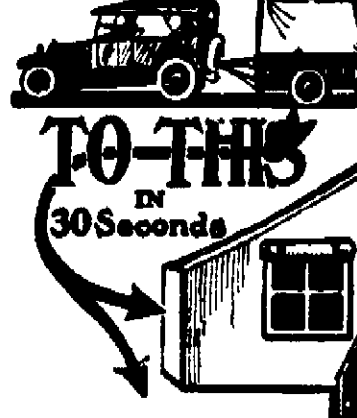

Sheep and Civilization.

Man discovered in his earliest days that "of all cattle, the sheep is the most profitable," as a book on farming published just four centuries ago puts it. Man saw in the sheep a heaven-sent store of food and clothing. Why bother to hunt when you could capture a few wild sheep and turn them into a tame flock always at hand? To help him to keep his sheep man tamed the dog and made him his ally.

Bed as a Character Reveal.

It has been said that a man's character may be judged by his bed. Men of Spartan tastes and who take a large part in the active affairs of the world often favor a hard, simple bed, and despise the frills, embellishments and fripperies affected by men of lesser caliber. The duke of Wellington loved best to rest in a crude camp bed and was wont to say that no feather nest in all the world was so conducive to restful repose as his hard camp stretcher. "Bobbie" Burns, the great Scotch poet, retained his little box bed, neither deep nor wide. M. Thiers, when on his travels, took with him a little iron bed, as he said it was the only thing on which he could rest in absolute ease.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 23, 1923.

TWO BIG PROBLEMS.

The automobile industry has grown with such tremendous strides that there is hardly a city or village in the United States that is not confronted with two problems—traffic regulations and parking space for cars. In Kingston the problem has rapidly outgrown plans to meet it, and Kingston must move promptly toward a sensible solution of a difficulty which besets every business man, every automobile owner, a majority of tourists and a large portion of the pedestrian population.

Automobile development has revolutionized methods of trade here as elsewhere. The day when merchants found trade waiting for them at seven o'clock in the morning and felt compelled to remain open until nine o'clock every evening and ten o'clock or later on Saturday nights is only a memory. Business is conducted with greater intensity than formerly. The automobile makes it impossible to forecast accurately the hours when trade will be brisk or when it will be dull. Ownership of an automobile in many cases has entirely changed the nature and volume of trading.

Streets and earth roads which were ample to carry the traffic of twenty-five years ago are inadequate now to accommodate lines of swiftly-moving vehicles and at the same time provide parking space for hundreds of other vehicles whose owners are engaged in business or pleasure. Designating some streets as one-way thoroughfares is one method of relieving traffic congestion but it is only one step.

The people principally concerned in the present problem are the automobile owners and the merchants. The motorist cannot be expected to keep moving constantly, he is entitled to some place where he may park his car while he is engaged in business. He is also entitled to find means of ready access to the business place to which he or his family are bound and has a right to protest against being shut out from the curb by another motorist. It is an imposition to require him to carry heavy bundles gathered in a shopping expedition for a long distance to the only available place he has been able to find for parking his car.

The merchant is entitled to have his store easily reached by the motorist. At the same time he is entitled to parking space for his own car during business hours. When the curb in front and for a considerable distance on either side of his store is blocked by automobiles which are parked there for several hours at a stretch, he believes that customers coming by automobile will seek a competitor if they find it impossible to reach his place easily. At the same time, a man whose car is parked in front of his store may be buying a big bill of goods and loading it in his car.

The tourist travelling through a city has a right to travel through various residential and business streets in order to "size up" the town, and the local car owner has a right to keep travelling in a square instead of along many streets or country roads, even when traffic in that square is congested. The merchant has a right to demand that the tourist be allowed to pass through the business section and not be routed through residential streets, but the motorist has a right to be given consideration over those who have no business in the business section.

Not a day passes that these matters are not discussed in practically every section of Kingston. It is a practical problem and affects more people than any other local matter which has arisen for many years. It cannot be solved without study from every angle. The rights of every class of people affected must be considered. It will be no disgrace for anyone to modify or withdraw a plan once projected; an attitude of insistence upon immediate adoption of a cut-and-dried plan is evidence only of pig-headedness.

Who will help solve Kingston's traffic and parking problems?

According to Washington dispatches, the well-informed say that, though the Republicans "eater to the dry," the Democrats will not "take the Republican bait" and inject into the next Presidential campaign a party platform declaration on "a subject of such bitter controversy as the liquor question" which will be "a football of politics for many years in the future." However that may be, it looks as if individual candidates of both parties are going to have a hard time dodging hecklers and declining to say openly just how they stand on this "live" question, particularly in the Eastern States.

Wives are advised to tame their husbands by feeding them on lettuce and prunes, but surely a husband who will tamely submit to such a diet is tame enough already.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Is birds' nest soup really made of nests?
2. Can a spider make all kinds of web, or is there a different kind of spider for each kind?
3. Do polar bears change the color of their coats with the season?

Answers in Monday's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. In planting shade trees, should they be at the edge of the sidewalk toward the road, or toward the house?

In rural districts of course the old arrangement of trees between the sidewalk and roadway is pretty; but often in cities it is practical to place them—where there is enough lawn or space between the sidewalk and house, about three feet inside the inner edge of the sidewalk. This gives the roots a chance to absorb moisture—which they cannot do as well when running under pavement—and keeps the tree out of the way of damage from wires, teams, etc.

2. What is the fastest swimming fish?

The mackerels as a class are considered very rapid. Rate of speed in any fish would be influenced by many factors, for instance, the bonito (Sarda sarda) found both in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean is noted for swift swimming, impossible to calculate. The tall with one sweep is thought able to propel the bonito 100 yards.

3. Why do they call nuthatches such a queer name?

The "hatch" refers to an old notion that this bird hatched or chopped into nuts with its bill, to get at the meat. The verb hatch in this sense comes from the same root as hatchet, the tool used to chop with. Ornithologists now think the nuthatch pecks into nuts less for the meat than for the worm inside feeding on the nut.

DURANT AND STARS SOLD WHEN THEY ARRIVE.

One of the largest driveaways of motorcars which has ever been made by a local dealer was that of the Van Kleeck Motor and Garage, Inc., local distributors of the Durant and Star cars on Friday when the Messrs. Van Kleeck drove in fifteen cars from the factories at Elizabeth, N. J., and Long Island City. In the big driveaway were models of the Durant four, Durant six and Star car. The Messrs. Van Kleeck have the agency for the Durant and Star cars for Ulster and Greene counties and all of the cars which came in Friday were sold before they arrived from the factory. Arrangements are being made for a driveaway next week of 30 cars which will include all models of the cars handled by them, including sport sedans, touring cars, station wagons and other four and six cylinder jobs.

BATHING SCENE HALTS HOT PEDESTRIANS

The show window of Charles A. Warren, at 260 Fair street, is attracting much attention with its display of marine millinery, a monster illuminated poster depicting a bathing girl wearing a rubber cap being in the background. The foreground represents a beach, being of sand, with children seated besides sand piles with shovel and tin pails. It is not only artistically arranged but the showing is a reasonable one. Many pedestrians stop to admire the window display.

Yale Won All Three.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New London, Conn., June 23.—The decisive victory of Yale in their regatta events with Harvard yesterday was today construed as convincing proof of the efficiency of Coach Ed Leader's rowing methods. Leader, sombre and moody as ever, had little to say of his charges' splendid victories but the perfect, machine-like and even rowing of the varsity, junior varsity and freshmen crews was more eloquent than words.

Swordfish of Mackerel Family.

The swordfish is allied by family ties to the mackerel. It attains a length of from 12 to 15 feet and sometimes specimens 20 feet long have been caught. It has a much elongated upper jaw, which is the "sword," and this is commonly three-tenths of the length of the fish. The body is covered with minute scales, its color is bluish-black above and silvery-white below, and the ventral fins are lacking. Neapolitan and Sicilian fishermen make great commerce of this fish and its flesh is held to be very palatable.

EVANGELINE LAND SCENE OF PLAY

Background for "The White Rose" is Along Louisiana Bayou Made Famous by the Post Longfellow.

The original music score of the newest D. W. Griffith motion picture, "The White Rose," which comes to the Keeney Theater for three days, commencing Monday, after a successful run at the Lyric Theater, New York city, will be used by the Keeney
Theater orchestra, which will be under the leadership of the Lyric orchestra, who will arrive in town for special orchestra rehearsals at ten o'clock Monday morning.

The extent to which literature is searched for appropriate scenes and settings in connection with the production of motion pictures is shown by the story involved in producing "The White Rose." It is a modern story with an ancient background.
The scene is placed in the region along the Bayou Teche in Louisiana, which was used by the poet Longfellow as the scene for part of the story of "Evangeline." It was along the Bayou Teche that the two lovers who had been separated in Acadia when the French settlers were exiled from Nova Scotia by the British governor,
Lawrence, passed close to each other,
Evangeline asleep beneath a tree on the bank and Gabriel pointing northward in his boat, still in search of her.

Research in connection with the production of "The White Rose" has disclosed the correspondence on which Longfellow based part of his famous poem. The information was furnished by a college classmate,
Judge Edward Simon, who furnished Longfellow with the local legend which differs from the poet's tale. The bones of Evangeline rest in the little churchyard of St. Martin's, which is the second oldest church in Louisiana. Longfellow never visited the Bayou Teche country, for he describes willows on the bank of the stream, while in fact there are no willows there; instead, deep-green live oak trees dip down into the stream, their branches draped with Spanish moss; intermingling are cypress and palmetto growth, while the stream is choked with water hyacinths.

Such scenes seem fitting as the background for "The White Rose."

is the last word of all earthly happiness.

Nature has adorned the landscape to add to the setting for this beautiful thing we call HOME.

In the DONOVAN addition on Washington Avenue, nature has expressed her sublimest thoughts.

Will you not join that fine colony of people who are planning to build their HOMES on that beautiful spot?

Drive out on Washington Avenue and see what is being done.

PRIEST'S SILVER JUBILEE SUNDAY

St. Peter's Parish To Do Honor to The Rev. Father Neumann Who Has Done So Much For It.

An event of unusual significance will be celebrated on Sunday and Monday, June 24 and 25, marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. J. P. Neumann, pastor of the parish of St. Peter's. Since his arrival here in 1915 Father Neumann has been very intimately associated with the civic life of the city as well as presiding over the spiritual destiny of a large portion of the community and both by his tireless efforts in the interests of those under his direction as well as active interest in the public weal, and by his talents and personality he has won and retained the respect and affection of a great number of citizens of Kingston.

Father Neumann was ordained in Belgium at the American College attached to the University of Louvain and for a year after ordination was retained as prefect of the American College. At the behest of Archbishop Corrigan he was meritoriously transferred to the New York archdiocese and assigned as assistant to St. Joseph's church, West 125th street, New York city. Here he remained except for a period of about seven months as assistant at St. Boniface church, East 17th street, New York city, until 1903, when he was named administrator of the Church of Our Lady of Victory in Mt. Vernon. During his term as curate and administrator his ability and self-sacrificing zeal won for him the love of his people as well as the recognition of his superiors. Thereupon after a brief interval as assistant at the Church of the Assumption in New York city, Archbishop Farley promoted him to the pastorate of the parish of St. John the Baptist de la Salle in Stapleton, Staten Island. It was here during an incumbency of six years that Father Neumann's exceptional qualifications, as pastor of souls and director of parochial affairs, became manifest. His fame as a preacher of unusual eloquence, equally conversant in English as well as in German, his mother tongue, spread throughout the country and his services in this capacity were much in demand at conventions and other civic and religious gatherings. Leaving his parish on Staten Island in a most flourishing condition, he was summoned to assume the responsibility of the rectorship of the Church of the Assumption, West 49th street, New York city. At the sacrifice of his health, he labored unceasingly in the interests of his flock throughout the five years of his pastorate in this congested section of the metropolis, and succeeded in this space of time in reducing the parish indebtedness over $40,000 after erecting a fully equipped gymnasium for the social needs of the parish. Seeing his health seriously impaired his Eminence Cardinal Farley sent him to Kingston to the parish of St. Peter's where he has labored so successfully with renewed health and vigor.

His achievements since his appointment to Kingston are well known. The liquidation of the parish debt and the renovations, the purchase and erection of parish playgrounds, and repairs in church, school and rectory, the adornment of the sanctuary and above all the spiritual advancement of the parish attest to the indefatigable zeal of Father Neumann after twenty-five years still true to his pledge made at ordination to spend and to be spent in the service of his Master.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

New York, June 23.—With the exception of motor and tire stocks which showed heaviness, the stock market was steady at the opening today.

The market closed steady. Trading was dull and featureless throughout the session with interest mainly centered in the rail and oil stock, in which price tendencies were mostly upward. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds were steady.

Beethoven Said to Have Found Motif in the Persistent Sound of Door Knocker.

To an ordinary mind it would scarcely seem possible that much music could be got out of a door-knocker. Yet it was this sound which is said to have inspired Beethoven's glorious violin concerto in D. As the musician lay awake one night shaping the concerto in his mind, his thoughts were interrupted by a belated neighbor who was endeavoring to arouse his housekeeper and get her to come down and let him in. Beethoven heard his persistent knocking for admission—four slow deliberate knocks at a time. The constant repetition gave the composer the idea he sought and those four knocks are heard all through the opening movement of the concerto, which begins with four unaccompanied D's on the drum—seemingly as unmelodious and unpromising an opening phrase as one could imagine. In commenting upon the circumstance Sir George Grove has said "those four knocks were to Beethoven what the bulk of the old Temeraire was to Turner, or the daffodils to Wordsworth—commonplace in themselves, but transmuted by the fire of genius into an imperishable monument."

Vanishing American Birds.

One of the most remarkable exhibits in the habitat group in the American Museum of Natural History is the nest of a duck hawk on a shelving rock on the Palisades, with the rocky rampart of nature stretching in the background and the placid river below.

It deserves to be ranked as a work of art—this glimpse of the bird life of New York's beauty spot—as, in fact, do all the exhibits in the habitat group.

As one enters the booth in which the scene is installed, one finds it hard to believe that he is looking at the combined work of the artist and the painter, and not on the actual shelving rock hundreds of feet above the Hudson, with the mother-bird poised in the summer air, hovering over the nest with the food for her young grasped in her claws.

And the duck hawk is still to be found—or was to be found there in 1908, when three pairs were nesting across the river from the city's hub-bub—Exchange.

BOY SCOUTS

BANKERS AID SCOUT THRIFT

A line of boy scout depositors drawn up at a receiving window in charge of a boy scout teller, is a frequent occurrence at an increasing number of banks where boy scout thrift departments are an established feature.

The thrift training of the scout program appeals to business men, and American bankers are more and more becoming active allies in scouting's work for substantial citizenship.

The president of a national bank of Richmond, Va., Oliver J. Sands, says of scouting's thrift requirements for advancement in rank: "Earning and depositing a dollar in a bank before a tenderfoot becomes a second class scout, and two dollars before he becomes a first class scout, means that many thousand American boys are being taught the great lesson of thrift."

A national bank in Spokane, Wash., is an enthusiastic supporter of the movement.

A neat little folder in which scouts can paste 5-cent thrift stamps is issued by a bank of Portland, Ore.

San Francisco scouts for deposits of money earned through their own efforts receive double points in a thrift contest conducted by a savings bank. This institution in addition allows the boys to make deposits at troop meetings.

A scout's main inspiration in saving is the ninth law which says: "A scout is thrifty. He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns."

A BALTIMORE SCOUT ON DUTY

Baltimore, Md., takes great interest in her scout's citizenship training and offers them frequent opportunities for community service. During Boy's week 50 acted as traffic officers. Scout William Aire, Troop 117, above, was stationed at the busiest corner in the city.

BOY SCOUTS AS LEADERS

When the city of St. Louis, some months ago, decided to put on its safety council a corps of junior safety cadets, it placed the responsibility of electing representatives to the formation meeting of the cadets in the hands of the school children. Then boy scout leadership qualities received a tribute, for the school children elected the entire scout organization—approximately 50 troops—for the important mission. The junior safety cadets now constitute a division of the council as strong as any of its other divisions. It numbers a total of 3,500 boys, who pledge themselves to watch for and stop dangerous practices among their fellows, to report to the proper authorities all dangerous conditions that come to their attention and to spread safety propaganda. The city also conducts examinations for safety merit badges among boy scouts as part of its safety program.

LIONS DO SCOUTS GOOD TURN

The Sacramento (Cal.) boy scouts are rejoicing in the gift of a weekend camp site near enough to the city so that they can easily go there for week-end camps and for training in outdoor tests. The camp site is the gift of the Sacramento Lions, who plan also to raise money enough to erect a lodge on the grounds.

SCOUTS TO SAVE GI

ye have tears prepare to shed them now!" For it is a hard passage that this order for ales, wines and spirits will have any weight with the officials on the White Eastbound voyages, from New York to England, the one dry. But coming to America passengers can order what they can consume—and they must consume it before the five-mile line off the coast of America, for there it is
